Roctakon has an interesting life... flying several times a week all over the world to dj money gigs for the button-down and ho-fit masses, but inside he's a throwback DJ from DC who loves disco and classic house. The two worlds collide here (and I don't mean mash-ups, more on a theoretical level). It's a straight disco-house-techno mix, but he mixes the compositions like he would one of his expertly crafted club-sets (seriously, he may be the best big club dj in the world). Getting high praise from the DJ world, this is refreshing release that is a direct opposite of the short-attention mixes coming out today.

"Roc has managed to collect a bunch of songs that I would never listen to normally into one long mix that held my attention. While the mix has no beginning, middle or end it is mixed well and deserves a listen" - Blu Jemz

"In an era of music that is largely dominated by trendiness, hype, and fleeting tastes, it's nice to be able to listen to a mix ambitious enough to focus on timeless music instead of the flash-in-the-pan "genre of the moment." - Emynd
